

to the Senate Select Intelligence Committee on February 7, 2001 wherein he stated that "The military balance in which India enjoys advantages over Pakistan in most areas of conventional defense preparedness remains the same. This includes a decisive advantage in fighter aircraft almost twice as many men under arms and a much larger economy to support defense expenditures."

(d) India's nuclear and missile policy of maintaining a minimum credible deterrent is based on a realistic assessment of global trends, offensive capabilities in the region and our technological options. Our nuclear and military capabilities are meant only for self-defense and seek to ensure that India's independence and integrity is not threatened in future. Government remains fully committed to taking all necessary steps to safeguard the nation's security in accordance with its own assessment of threats to our security.

Failure of DRDO
